

Reasons for Trauma-Informed Education

- To maximize student's sense of security; emotional and physical.
- To strengthen student's self-regulation skills.
- To accommodate the emotional needs of stressed and anxious students.
- To support and promote positive relationships between students and between students and adults/staff.
- To strengthen an environment of mutual respect for students and adults/staff.
- To promote a supportive and cooperative school climate. To reduce student aggression, conflicts, and bullying. To enhance the development of empathy in students. To elevate student achievement.
- To provide an environment in which every student can reach full potential.
- To increase teacher satisfaction in professional role.
- To generate a sense of hope and future in all students.

Barbara E. Oehlberg
Child Trauma and Educational Consultant

35375 Solon Road
Solon, Ohio 44139
(440) 248-9519

www.reachingdificulkids.org
bsaxon@ameritech.net